April 29th, 2024 ( The Geller Report - Delivered by Newstex )

This is an after action report on the nationwide protests against the violence against Hindu Indian girls by Islamic supremacists.

The incident has not only sparked widespread grief but also led to global protests, including a notable rally in New Jersey. Echoing the sentiments at Times Square, the demonstrators in New Jersey also aimed to raise awareness and demand action against forced conversions, rape, and violence targeting Hindu women. The display in Times Square particularly stood out, featuring Neha's image alongside the message 'Save Hindu daughter' amplifying the campaign for justice.

'*Justice for Neha*', 'Save India's daughters from Love Jihad

United States (NYC, DC Atlanta, Chicago): On April 28 Sunday, several members of the Indian diaspora gathered at the iconic Time Square to express their anguish at the brutal killing of a Hindu girl Neha Hiremath by Mr. Fayaz on a university campus in Karnataka, India. Similar rallies were held at other places such as Lincoln memorial,DC, Chicago and Atlanta. All attendees expressed their deep concern about the pervasiveness of what is called 'love jihad' targeting Hindu girls and women across India.

Attendees expressed deep concern that brutality seen in the cases of Neha, Shraddha and many thousands of young girls are not cases of isolated acts but a very well pre-planned, well funded operation of what is termed as 'Love Jihad' perpetrated across the nation by a deeply entrenched ecosystem. Whether Fayaz brutally stabbing of Neha in her neck 14 times in 30 seconds or Aftab who cut Shraddha into many pieces as well as many girls who were stabbed, beaten to coma it is part of an agenda of targeting girls of other religions by certain sections of Muslim community where a targeted girl has only two options, either subject to the ecosystem agenda or invite brutal fate. This is affecting girls of all religions where for example in Kerala, the clergy has publicly expressed several times how thousands of Christian girls are brainwashed and duped into marriage through 'love jihad' and 'narcotic jihad'. Outside India, similar incidents occur in the UK where grooming gangs belonging to a certain religion target minor girls and use them as sex tools .While West suffers from political correctness, India suffers from apathy, systemic weakness and opportunistic politicians chasing vote banks. After Neha's murder in Karnataka, India, the State Government callously dismissed it as a case of 'love gone bad' in spite of CCTV footage showing the extent of unspeakable brutality. This alone speaks volumes about the ground situation for the average Hindu woman in India.

Last year Organiser portal gave details of at least 60 out of many hundreds of cases where young Hindu girls met a brutal end, some cut into pieces. OplIndia Love Jihad archives give details of literally hundreds of cases running in 70+ web pages with links to articles on love jihad victims. Just as we are recovering from the horror Neha underwent, we hear today how a mother of a minor girl who was relentlessly being harassed by a minor Muslim boy in Jehangir area of Delhi, sent her daughter to a hostel for safety, only to be visited by the same boy and his friends and shot to death. This was in spite of the mother seeking police help to protect her daughter. These crimes do not happen in isolation. There is a very powerful, well funded ecosystem as the Government as police move on while victims are devastated and most criminals abscond or get bail only to commit more crimes with the active support of the eco-system. Religious indoctrination is the major part of the agenda which is enhanced immensely by Madrasah education. Per social media, the brutality which Neha subjected is based on medieval mindset justified using Quranic scriptures such as 47th chapter, Sura 4 that asks Muslims to smite the necks of the non-believers called Kafirs.

This targeting of girls and young women is another form of terrorism used for political conquest and is increasingly intertwined with human trafficking. Both the love jihad and human trafficking perpetrated with help of narcotics is a multi-billion dollar industry and have colluded with the media, police officials, politicians, lawyers and even judiciary.

As Ross Kemp, the well known international journalist described in his celebrated 'Extreme World' series, India spends a larger percentage of GDP on arms than the US, has multi-billion dollar space programs but is not addressing the problem of such scale and brutality. What is the purpose of the Indian constitution if it cannot support the fundamental right to life and freedom of a young woman or even worse, a minor girl? Where is deterrence? What is the purpose of the so-called National and State Commissions for Women? These are the burning questions on the minds of those who studied the matter and attended the rallies.

Rally participants urge Indian Government to address this with the urgency it needs. Here are few suggestions:

- 1) There needs to be a recognition once a minor girl is targeted there are only two outcomes, either the targeted victim falls into the agenda or be brutally killed. As soon as an issue reported, Police need to urgently address to prevent the brutal outcome which includes not only solid protection to girl and her family but immediate investigation and arrest of the stalker and the operatives of the ecosystem working with him. It needs to be acted upon just as a terrorist act is being planned and committed.
- 2) For every such barbaric crime, there needs to fast track courts and mandatory death sentences within a period. Any local government official who cover up the crime should also be charged and given death sentence. Destruction of initial evidence by compromised officials need to be made a severe crime.
- 3) There needs to be a well publicized national number for victims and their families call and both state and center need to be involved when a case is reported. When victims do not get state support due to political considerations, the family members should not be left to their resources and be able to directly request the case be taken up by Center without needing state approval.
- 4) The National Commission for Women should be given powers to question local government officials and need to be tasked to document every case, provide every legal support to victims and families and each case need to be updated with the progress publicly available. NCW can contract this out by overseeing and any lapse need to be addressed by firing the staff and even charged.
5. Ban Madrassah education which promotes radicalization and use of women for political conquest.
6. Establishment of an independent commission to investigate the whole ecosystem, the human trafficking, the narcotics to come up with police and judicial reforms to address the issue.

As Ross Kemp indicated, this is a colossal shame if we do not address this urgently. The rallies of diaspora across various parts of the world that happened today and will continue in other parts in the coming days is to highlight the urgency of this situation.

"We won't take it anymore!"

The Women and Gender Equity Center hosted "Take Back the Night" on April 19, an annual rally to acknowledge and speak out against rape and domestic and sexual violence within the community.

During a check-in in the late afternoon, different organizations hosted tables to ask questions and grab resources provided. While waiting, guests made bracelets and rally posters. The opportunity allowed participants to socialize and bond before the event. WGEC director Zoe Miller and a few others took the opportunity to inform the audience the purpose of "Take Back the Night" and highlight available resources.

At 5:30 p.m., the main speaker of the event, Tena Hahn-Rodriguez, the Interim Executive Director for the Black & Pink organization, began their keynote speech. Black & Pink is an organization dedicated to abolishing the prison system while protecting LBGTQIAS2S+ people and those with HIV/AIDS who are affected by that system.

Hahn-Rodriguez began by instructing the audience to take some deep breaths and repeat self-love affirmations to themselves. After the audience had centered themselves, Hahn-Rodriguez discussed the importance of self-love and acceptance. By setting firm boundaries, checking in on oneself, shifting one's perspective and connecting with community, the road to self-love in, as Hahn-Rodriguez put it, "a society that accepts an unhealthy amount of violence as the status quo," is traversable. After being reminded to take care of themselves and to "find your people," the audience was urged to begin the journey of healing.

"As someone who finally feels love and acceptance at 45 years old, I don't want you to wait," Hahn-Rodriguez said. "Love yourself now. Don't wait until you're 45 to do it. I want to save you from a lot of pain and suffering."

Subsequently, the main event of the evening began -- the march. After volunteers passed out cards with chants listed, Miller once again took the microphone and informed the audience on what to do. Everyone filed out in a large chain of groups to begin the march to Elmwood Park, holding up signs in protest and beginning chants. The crowd's voices all came together as one, chanting phrases like "we won't take it anymore" and that they were "here to take back the night!"

The feeling of empowerment within those in attendance was palpable as the massive crowd came together and provided an outlet to protest the injustice. The steady pace wasn't too challenging, and the feelings of solidarity and hope were awe-inspiring. It was incredible to experience the diversity of such a large crowd all moving with one goal in mind. The environment helped encourage bravery among its inhabitants and fostered new bonds to be formed between the participants.

The crowd was served Mangia Italiana's alfredo and marinara pasta as they reached Elmwood Park to conclude the event. As those in attendance talked amongst themselves, they echoed a feeling of accomplishment.

"I loved how we just had a ton of people walking such a long distance," UNO Student, Leaf Price said. "If I could change anything, I would have loved to march right on Dodge Street. Other than that, it was great to have all these people come out."

The tragic murder of Neha Hiremath, the daughter of Congress councillor Niranjan Hiremath from Hubli, Karnataka, has transcended international borders, reaching the bustling heart of New York's Times Square. This outcry is led by the Indian diaspora in the United States, who have rallied under banners reading "Justice for Neha," "Stop Love Jihad," and "Save Hindu Girl," bringing significant attention to the case. Neha Hiremath, a 23-year-old first-year MCA student, was brutally murdered on April 18 at BVB College Campus in Karnataka's Hubli. Reports indicate that Fayaz Khondunaik, a former student of the same college, attacked Neha, stabbing her multiple times including in her neck and stomach. Both the attacker and the victim were subsequently rushed to a local hospital, where Neha was pronounced dead. The motive behind the murder, as claimed by Neha's father, is rooted in what he alleges to be a case of 'love jihad' - a term used by some to describe relationships used to coerce Hindu women into converting to Islam.

The incident has not only sparked widespread grief but also led to global protests, including a notable rally in New Jersey. Echoing the sentiments at Times Square, the demonstrators in New Jersey also aimed to raise awareness and demand action against forced conversions, rape, and violence targeting Hindu women. The display in Times Square particularly stood out, featuring Neha's image alongside the message "Save Hindu daughter" amplifying the campaign for justice.
